Transformation of Former Brownfields Sites Singled out for Excellence

Chicago - The Public Building Commission of Chicago, (PBC) chaired by Chicago Mayor Rahm Emanuel, has been honored with a national award of excellence for its environmental program, which demonstrates excellence in meeting the challenges posed by environmentally contaminated project sites in the City of Chicago, Cook County and other surrounding communities in Illinois.

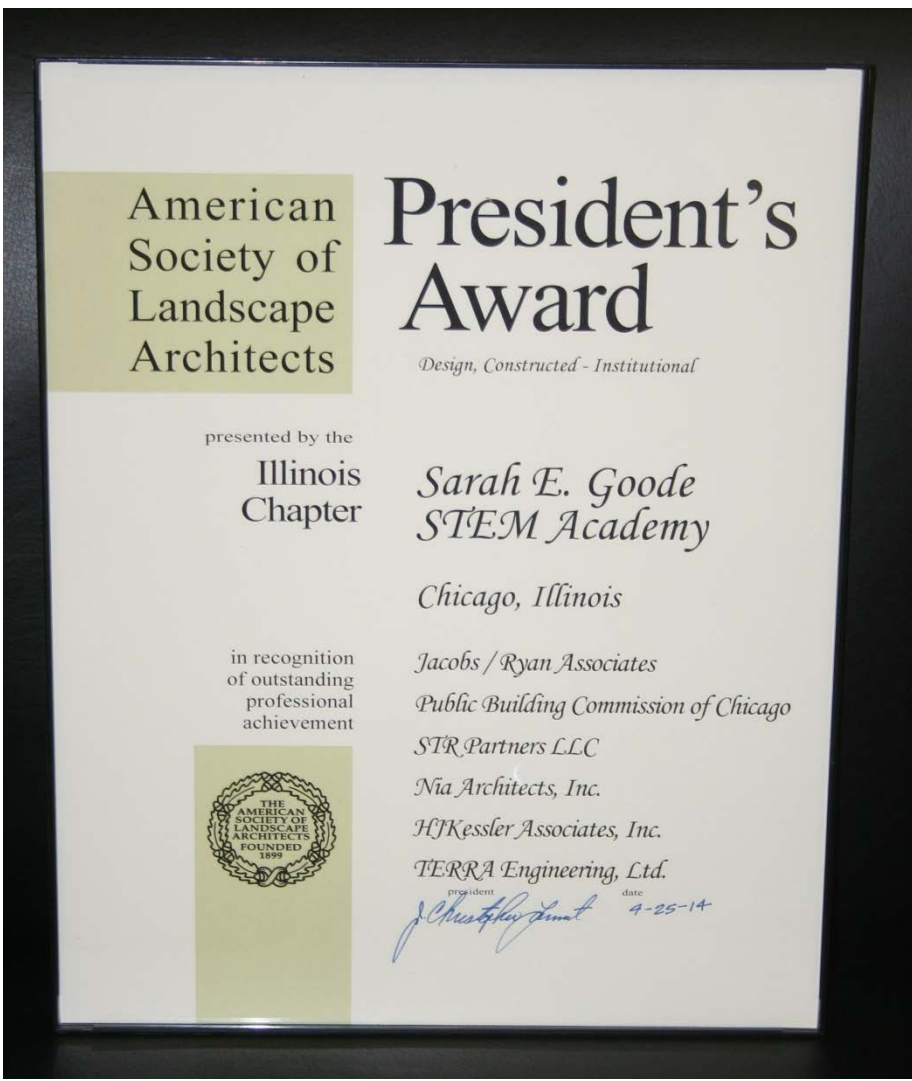

The National Association of Environmental Professionals (NAEP) issued the award on April 9 at its annual awards ceremony, giving national recognition to PBC for its outstanding environmental program. The program focuses on environmental planning, the use of efficient and environmentally friendly technologies, and
